Once upon a time there lived a king and a queen who had two sons: big Prince Luke and little Prince Jonas.

“Two children are not enough for me,” said the queen to the king one day. “I wish we had more children. Children are simply wonderful!”

The king was not so sure. He looked at all the castle windows that had been cracked during princely soccer games. He remembered the princes’ howls of protest when they didn’t want to go to bed in the evening.
